Tonight, December 3, the 10th National Foreign Information Awards ceremony will take place in Hanoi.

According to Mr. Nguyen Que Lam, Deputy Head of the Central Steering Committee for Foreign Information Affairs (Central Propaganda Department) and head of the Organizing Committee of the contest, the entries in this year's contest are Vietnam's message to international friends about foreign policy that is both independent and self-reliant - but also always demonstrates friendliness and readiness to integrate multilaterally and diversify in foreign affairs: "The National Foreign Information Awards is not only a regular press award, but also a forum for those who love Vietnam and support Vietnam to create and spread images, Vietnamese values, Vietnamese intellectual products and Vietnamese messages to the world. The contest has fully covered the country's important political, foreign and cultural events and achievements. Along with that is information to international friends about the policies and guidelines of the Party and State of Vietnam and the priority development contents in the current period. This time, in the National Award for Foreign Information, we prioritize topics on the development of science and technology, innovation, digital transformation, green transformation as well as the circular economy."

This year's award received nearly 1,300 entries from domestic and foreign authors, in 10 categories. In addition to works in English, French, and Spanish, this year there are also entries in many new languages, such as Arabic, Uzbek, Sinhala (a popular language in Sri Lanka) ...
